

Sassy Ross

REVERENCE

Were it written at your birth
Jacqueline, Jean, Mona, Sessenne
or any appellation besides,
we would have, eventually,
dubbed you, "Winnie."
But your godmother met you first—
my grandmother called her a seer—
and she, seeing, robbed us
of that game of words, bestowing
at the baptismal font
of a Roman Catholic church
the name you later earned on harsh playgrounds of our youth.

Winnie, they must lengthen
their thesaurus, revise posthumous dictionaries to include the vibrating verb of you
who, giving, gave all your love outright.
Winnie, they must amend their tome of sacred texts
for Lord know s there's a m ass
of black saints missing.

Calabash

A JOURNAL OF CARIBBEAN ARTS AND LETTERS

Volume 4, Number 1 / Spring-Summer 2006

Information about this work:

REVERENCE

By: Sassy Ross

Start Page: 135

URL: <http://www.nyu.edu/calabash/vol4no1/0401135.pdf>

Calabash: A Journal of Caribbean Arts and Letters is an international literary journal dedicated to publishing works encompassing, but not limited to, the Anglophone, Francophone, Hispanophone and Dutch-speaking Caribbean. The Journal is especially dedicated to presenting the arts and letters of those communities that have long been under-represented within the creative discourse of the region, among them: Aruba and the Netherlands Antilles, Maroon societies, and the Asian and Amerindian societies of the region. Calabash has a strong visual arts component.

Calabash is published by New York University. Please contact the publisher for further permissions regarding the use of this work. Publisher information may be obtained at:
<http://www.nyu.edu/calabash/about.html>

Calabash: A Journal of Caribbean Arts and Letters
© 2006 New York University