YOUR INSISTENCE

At the temple of your insistence are placed pears, pomegranates, all the rare fruits of the earth, all the beautiful words of the world,
sent you in cages—trapped peacocks.

In their feathers, eyes: all the browns, the blues, the greens—and nothing to match your beams of lightning.

Not pleased with rain in a country where it does not rain, all is sandstorm, parchment breaking. Not sated with themes stated, your ellipses let loose a tenure of caterpillars,

a sweep of pale butterflies. No tenderness will appease you, erase your disdain.
What should I ask the larger gods for on your behalf? What little heart will not shrivel quickly in the desert of your eyes?

Calabash: A Journal of Caribbean Arts and Letters is an international literary journal dedicated to publishing works encompassing, but not limited to, the Anglophone, Francophone, Hispanophone and Dutch-speaking Caribbean. The Journal is especially dedicated to presenting the arts and letters of those communities that have long been under-represented within the creative discourse of the region, among them: Aruba and the Netherlands Antilles, Maroon societies, and the Asian and Amerindian societies of the region. Calabash has a strong visual arts component.

Calabash is published by New York University. Please contact the publisher for further permissions regarding the use of this work. Publisher information may be obtained at: http://www.nyu.edu/calabash/about.html
