

Earl McKenzie

POET

(For Mervyn Morris, Edward Baugh, and Wayne Brown)

This chronicler of our pain
has the jewels of tears in his eyes,
through which he sees
where the treasure lies buried
on the map of our suffering.

At another time,
the tears are the precious stones of laughter,
through which he sees
the route to the mountain, habitation
of that mysterious form of understanding that triggers our mirth.

Suffering we share with all sentient beings;
laughter, it seems, is ours alone.
Using the poet's map,
the philosopher seeks our deepest secret
in the unity of both.

Calabash

A JOURNAL OF CARIBBEAN ARTS AND LETTERS

Volume 5, Number 1 / Summer-Fall 2008

Information about this work:

POET (For Mervyn Morris, Edward Baugh and Wayne Brown)

By: Earl McKenzie

Start Page: 28

URL: <http://www.nyu.edu/calabash/vol5no1/0501028.pdf>

Calabash: A Journal of Caribbean Arts and Letters is an international literary journal dedicated to publishing works encompassing, but not limited to, the Anglophone, Francophone, Hispanophone and Dutch-speaking Caribbean. The Journal is especially dedicated to presenting the arts and letters of those communities that have long been under-represented within the creative discourse of the region, among them: Aruba and the Netherlands Antilles, Maroon societies, and the Asian and Amerindian societies of the region. Calabash has a strong visual arts component.

Calabash is published by New York University. Please contact the publisher for further permissions regarding the use of this work. Publisher information may be obtained at: http://www.nyu.edu/calabash/about.html

Calabash: A Journal of Caribbean Arts and Letters
© 2008 New York University