I. In light of the readings and class discussion, provide a brief, reasoned answer to each of the following

A. Explain why it is or it is not reasonable to say: “Women have a behavioral predisposition to engage in sexually provocative self-presentations while simultaneously resisting male sexual advances as an evolutionary result of reproductive differences between women and men.”

B. If a (heterosexual) man seeks a woman to fulfill all his sexual desires in a non-marital relationship, would the Principle of Least Interest suggest he has a better chance with women seeking committed relationships or with women interested only in casual relationships? Explain why.

C. Someone states: “You can’t chose to be gay or straight - you are just born one or the other.” Provide an intelligent, critical response, with references to appropriate theories and evidence.

D. Someone claims: “Prior to the sexual revolution and feminism’s influence in the second half of the 20th century, on average (heterosexual) men had sex earlier than did women, had sex more often, more often had sex before marriage, had more sexual partners, and engaged in more extramarital affairs.” What is a knowledgeable response?

E. In the past, did women suppress their inherent, natural sexual preferences in favor of the inherent sexual preferences and fantasies of men, because of women’s subordinate status? Explain.
