All applicants to NYU are automatically considered for merit based aid with the on-time submission of the admissions application; however, it is important to note that a majority of the undergraduate scholarships at NYU are based on a combination of need and merit and require filing all financial aid applications by our deadlines. Since the amount of scholarship a student receives in their first year is typically the amount they will continue to receive each year if they remain otherwise eligible, filing late can affect eligibility in future years.

Both the FAFSA and the CSS Profile are based on “Prior Prior Year” tax data, increasing accuracy of awarding and allowing students and families to utilize taxes that they have already filed from two years prior. We strongly encourage the use of the FAFSA Data Retrieval Tool whenever possible. The Data Retrieval Tool allows students and parents to import their tax information into the FAFSA directly from the IRS. You do not need to send copies of taxes or W2 statements unless we specifically request them.

After applying for admission and financial aid, please be sure to frequently check the email address which you provided on your applications for any other requested information or important announcements.
