Financial aid is designed to assist students meet their degree requirements within a designated amount of time. Undergraduate students at New York University are normally expected to graduate when they have earned 128 credits or attempted 168 credits, whichever comes first. Students must earn a passing grade (A, B, C, D, or P, including accepted credits from Advanced Placement, Advanced Standing, and Transfer Student status) in a minimum of 76 percent of the courses in which they are enrolled each academic year (fall, spring, and summer semesters) and maintain a cumulative grade point average of at least 2.0. Student aid (federal, state, and campus-based) is not automatically extended beyond this period. In certain circumstances, however, the Office of Financial Aid may authorize additional student funding for one or more semesters. To be considered for an extension of financial aid eligibility, this form must be completed by an academic advisor* and submitted by the specified deadline. Students should allow approximately three (3) weeks for review and then view their ALBERT account for decision results.
