Class Description
This course aims to bring together diverse issues and perspectives in the rapidly evolving and changing area of international/global communication. Through a historical perspective, a framework will be established for the appreciation of the development of the immense scope, disparity, and complexity of this rapidly evolving field. Students will be encouraged to critically assess shifts in national, regional, and international media patterns of production, distribution, and consumption over time, leading to a critical analysis of the tumultuous contemporary global communication environment. Essential concepts of international communication will be examined, including trends in national and global media consolidation, cultural implications of globalization, international broadcasting, information flows, international communication law and regulation, and trends in communication and information technologies. The focus of the course will be international, with a particular emphasis on the Czech Republic.

The course will take the form of an interactive lecture/seminar combination, with two field trips to key local sites related to global media, and special guest speakers.

Upon completion of this course, students should be able to:
1. Understand the relationship between communication and empire
2. Explain how the privatization of communications industries affects global communication
3. Understand the political economy of global media
4. Describe the effect of the global digital divide
5. Detect and explain the phenomena of cultural globalization
6. Predict the future of global media, and international economic and political stability

Professionalism: As a grade, professionalism is similar to participation, but it means more than just active involvement in the classroom (although that is a basic tenet). Being a professional means demonstrating the following knowledge and skills: (a) being accountable and taking responsibility; (b) leadership; (c) integrity and honesty; (d) being engaged with the topic and the class; (e) communicating clearly; and (f) striving for excellence in all endeavors. Specifically, it means things like following up without being told to follow up; doing what you are supposed to do when you are supposed to do it and as well as you can do it; arriving on time and ready to “work;” keeping the faculty member aware of any situations that might impinge upon your performance; and fostering a relationship of mutual respect. NYU policy on attendance applies. Please familiarize yourself with this policy or see your instructor for clarification.

Case Study: Students will be required to actively participate in a forum for the discussion of global communication problems. This involves studying various approaches to issues, and taking part in the analysis of them as a class. The goal of this assignment is to critically examine controversial ‘real world’ issues affecting national media systems today in a simulated global context.

Reaction Paper: Students will write a reaction paper based on a practical part of the course. A successful reaction paper demonstrates critical thinking by integrating information and ideas without simply repeating or restating information or observations.

Exams: Two examinations will be taken, one during week six of the course and a final exam covering all course content during the final examination period. Test format will consist of a mixture of short answer and essay questions covering all readings, lecture, hand-out and class discussion content.

Failure to submit or fulfill any required course component results in failure of the class.

Grade A: Outstanding work featuring a comprehensive, inquisitive and dedicated approach to all tasks in and outside of class.

Grade C: Satisfactory work, basic general knowledge of course concepts.

Grade D: Passable work, limited competence in course concepts.

Grade F: Failure to exhibit understanding of basic course concepts.

Plagiarism Policy

According to the Liberal Studies Program Student Handbook, plagiarism is defined as follows:

Plagiarism is presenting someone else’s work as though it were one’s own. More specifically plagiarism is to present as one’s own a sequence of words quoted without quotation marks from another writer, a paraphrased passage from another writer’s work; facts or ideas gathered, organized and reported by someone else, orally and/or in writing. Since plagiarism is a matter of fact, not of the student’s intention, it is crucial that acknowledgment of the sources be accurate and complete. Even where there is no conscious intention to deceive, the failure to make appropriate acknowledgment constitutes plagiarism.

The College of Arts and Science’s Academic Handbook defines plagiarism similarly and also specifies the following:

“Presenting an oral report drawn without attribution from other sources (oral or written), writing a paragraph which, despite being in different words, expresses someone else’s idea without a reference to the source of the idea, or submitting essentially the same paper in two different courses (unless both teachers have given their permission in advance).

Receiving help on a take-home examination or quiz is also cheating – and so is giving that help – unless expressly permitted by the teacher (as in collaborative projects). While all this looks like a lot to remember, all you need to do is give credit where it is due, take credit only for original ideas, and ask your teacher or advisor when in doubt.”

“Penalties for plagiarism range from failure for a paper, failure for the course or dismissal from the university.” (Liberal Studies Program Student Handbook)

A professional and cooperative approach is encouraged, please see ‘professionalism’ section for more details. It is expected that mobile communication devices will not be intrusive to the class.

Suggested Co-curricular Activities
Attempts to consume regular mass media in the Czech Republic strongly encouraged! Even if it means spending an hour with a dictionary trying to read a newspaper/magazine article, or watching a sitcom or the news on television and absorbing what is possible. Also, following global media events through sources such as iwantmedia.com highly recommended!
