

EARTH WEEK EVENT CALENDAR

NYU
Earth Week 2013
April 15-22

Tuesday, April 16th:

Conscious Information Station
11:00 AM - 2:00 PM
Kimmel Lobby
Earthmatters! Club at NYU in partnership with Teens Turning Green will be hosting a Conscious Information Station in the Kimmel Lobby to provide helpful information about the transition from conventional to conscious living as well as free organic food and samples!

Environmental Town Hall Meeting
6:00 PM - 9:00 PM
Kimmel Center, Room 802
Teens Turning Green is launching the Conscious College Road Tour at 15 campuses nationwide with the goal of informing students about conscious living, smart consumption, and the collective impact of individual actions. Stop by Shorin for dinner, an Eco-Speaker, and to discuss implementing a guide for incoming students which specifies the right products to bring to school for a sustainable lifestyle.

Wednesday, April 17th:

New York Times Drilling Down Series with Ian Urbina
7:30 PM
Kimmel Center, 4th Floor, Eisner and Lubin Auditorium
Oxfam America at NYU presents award-winning investigative correspondent for The New York Times, Ian Urbina. Mr. Urbina is credited with making the issue of hydraulic fracturing accessible through his New York Times Drilling Down Series, the groundbreaking, data-driven series on fracking. On April 17th, Mr. Urbina will discuss how he used investigative journalism as a means to address controversial topics such as fracking. Rsvp required.

Thursday, April 18th:

Local Governance and Food Systems
6:30 PM - 8:30 PM
Furman Hall 216; New York University Law School, 245 Sullivan Street
As enthusiasm for building sustainable local food systems continues to grow, the discussion is shifting from a focus on entrepreneurship and enlightened consumerism to the need for civic engagement. A growing number of municipalities have become actively engaged in food systems planning—and New York is at the forefront of this movement.

NRDC's Mark Izeman and NYC's Food Policy Coordinator Kim Kessler will be joining some of the other city's leading figures in food policy and planning to discuss the role of local governance in building sustainable food systems. Brought to you by NYU Food Law, Wagner Food Policy Alliance, the Green Rabbits, and the NYU Department of Nutrition, Food Studies, and Public Health. RSVP required.

No Kitchen? No Garden? No Problem!

6:30 PM
Green Dorm Lounge
Love to grow and cook food but think you don't have the means to do it in New York? Come to the Community Agriculture Club's workshop and learn how to grow food in your apartment or dorm, and how to cook without a kitchen! Demonstrations will include sowing microgreens, growing sprouts, and baking mug cakes. Bring a mug!

Monday, April 22nd:

Clothing Swap
6:00 PM - 10:00 PM
Kimmel Center, Room 914
Celebrate Earth Day by bringing in a bag of your old clothes and swapping for some new treasures! Then join a DIY workshop and learn how to re-accessorize your new finds. Can't part with your clothes? Then feel free to drop off shoes, accessories, or anything else you'd like to share.

Tuesday, April 23rd:

Food Festival
7:30 - 9:30 PM
Kimmel Center, Room 802
NYU's first campus wide-food festival. Over a dozen cultural, spiritual, greek, and environmental organizations have come together to share their favorite dishes with you. All food is free, vegetarian, and deeeelicious. So come fill your evening with a wholesome meal and a friendly crowd. Presented by Oxfam @ NYU.

Wednesday, April 24th:

Food Justice in New York City
6:00 PM - 8:00 PM
Jerry H. Labowitz Theatre for the Performing Arts, Gallatin School
The food justice movement vies for a food system that is environmentally sound, economically viable, and socially just. This panel discussion will bring together some of the most innovative advocates and practitioners from New York City's food justice community, such as Brooklyn Grange President Ben Flanner and EcoStation NY's Director of Farms & Education, Maggie Cheney. As pioneers in this movement, the speakers will discuss their own work and the challenges that remain towards promoting a strong local food system, just access to healthy food, self-reliant communities, and a healthy environment in New York City. Organized by the Gallatin Greening Committee.

NYU Unplugged is baaaack...

Join NYU's residence hall challenge to reduce energy use. April 15-22
From April 15th-22nd we're holding our annual residence hall energy-saving challenge! Do your part by unplugging unnecessary "vampire loads," doing it in the dark, and whatever else necessary to save power—in return, every resident in the winning hall will receive special NYU Green apparel. We will decide the winner based on the percentage by which each residence hall cuts electricity use.

The winning residence hall receives FREE NYU apparel.

We encourage you to check our site for daily power usage updates, and to tell your neighbors about all the easy ways to unplug, win sweet swag, and save the world.
