

NEW YORK UNIVERSITY

A private university in the public service

Gallatin School of Individualized Study

715 Broadway, New York, NY 10003-6806

Telephone: 212-998-7364 • Fax: 212-995-4150

Dear Prospective Student:

I am delighted to learn of your interest in the Gallatin School of Individualized Study at New York University. For more than 30 years, Gallatin's innovative approach to education has given students the opportunity to design an academic program tailored to their individual interests. Named for Albert Gallatin, one of the founders of NYU, the School enables students to draw on the vast resources of the entire University and to take advantage of the unsurpassed opportunities New York City offers by pursuing independent study, tutorials, internships, and private lessons in the arts.

Each Gallatin student is assigned a faculty adviser in the student's primary academic area of interest. The student and adviser then design an individualized program of study that incorporates courses from most of NYU's graduate schools and colleges and utilizes the educational, cultural, business, and artistic institutions of New York City. You may attend Gallatin on a full-time or part-time basis.

On selected evenings, we hold information sessions at Gallatin (715 Broadway, 6th Floor) to inform prospective students about the application procedure, academic offerings at Gallatin, and our faculty advising process. We invite you to learn more about our M.A. program. Please visit our Web site at www.nyu.edu/gallatin or call 212-992-9824 for the schedule and to make your reservation. If you have questions about Gallatin and are unable to attend an information session, please call 212-998-7364 or e-mail gallatin.gradadmissions@nyu.edu.

I have enclosed an application for admission. You will soon be receiving our bulletin under separate cover. In the meantime, please visit our Web site for more information.

We look forward to receiving your application.

Frances R. Levin
Director of Enrollment Management