The Conservation Center Announces the Andrew W. Mellon Fellow in Conservation Education

The Conservation Center is pleased to announce that Margo Delidow has been named the Andrew W. Mellon Fellow in Conservation Education at the Institute of Fine Arts. This position, together with a parallel fellowship at the Winterthur/University of Delaware Program, is supported by a grant awarded by the Mellon Foundation as part of a pilot program to begin to strengthen the pipeline of future educators in the conservation profession.

The advanced-level fellows will receive focused training and classroom experience under the mentorship of senior faculty to prepare them for a future teaching career. As part of the pilot program, NYU and the University of Delaware will also partner with other graduate conservation programs to develop significant off-site teaching experiences including visiting lectures and four-week residencies to broaden the teaching opportunities for each fellow.

Ms. Delidow received her BFA from the College for Creative Studies, School of Art and Design and her MA from Buffalo State College. She is currently a research fellow in Sculpture Conservation at the Museum of Modern Art and will join the Conservation Center as a full-time teaching fellow this fall.

Please join us in welcoming Margo to the Conservation Center and the IFA.
