INTRODUCTION

This course is an introduction to the basic concepts, theoretical debates, and issues on National Security. The course is roughly divided into three sections. In the first part, we are going to look at major theoretical schools of international relations, their definitions of the international system and the implications for security studies. We will also discuss the meanings of concepts such as national security, national interest, and the security dilemma. In the second part, we are going to look at the US national security establishment, the major actors and institutions involved and how decisions are made. In the third section, after a brief overview of the evolution of American national security from Cold War to our day, we will focus on current security challenges and debates. We will talk about the effects of September 11 on American national security, the war on terrorism, and the tensions between civil liberties and national security. We will also discuss the politics of nuclear proliferation, environmental degradation, infectious diseases and global poverty and whether these issues are best dealt with within the parameters of the national security paradigm. We will finish by discussing alternative concepts to national security, such as human or global security and how the definition of national security could be transformed in order to deal more efficiently with the emerging problems of a globalizing world.

REQUIREMENTS:

Students are required to attend each class and do the assigned readings prior to the class. They are responsible for all readings on the syllabus, regardless of whether or not it is covered in the class. There may be changes to the syllabus during the semester and students are responsible for these changes. This course is a combination of the lecture and discussion formats, so students are highly encouraged to ask questions and participate in the class discussions. Attendance and participation will be worth 10% of your overall grade.

There will also be 5 pop-up quizzes throughout the semester. There will be no make-up if you miss a quiz. The quizzes will be very brief, usually consisting of one or two questions regarding the readings; they will be worth two points each and will not be returned. The quizzes will be 10% of your overall grade.
Students will also be given a mid-term and a final exam. These exams will be in-class, composed of identification and short-answer questions and essays. The mid-term is worth 30% and the final exam is worth 50% of your overall grade. The exams will cover both the reading material and the lectures.

Students are also encouraged to familiarize themselves with major journals and magazines covering international relations and foreign policy and follow the international section of one of the major newspapers. Here are some useful links:

Financial Times (http://news.ft.com/world)
Washington Post (http://www.washingtonpost.com/wp-dyn/content/world)
Foreign Affairs (http://www.foreignaffairs.org)
Foreign Policy in Focus (http://www.fpif.org/)
The National Interest (http://www.nationalinterest.org)
Foreign Policy Association (http://www.fpa.org/)
Council on Foreign Relations (http://www.cfr.org/)

REQUIRED READINGS

Textbooks: Two textbooks are assigned for this class:

AMERICAN NATIONAL SECURITY

NATIONAL SECURITY FOR A NEW ERA
Donald M. Snow; Pearson Longman, 2004

Online Articles:

Please note that all the additional reading for the class is available online. Please follow the links on the syllabus to read the articles online. For easier access to the links, an online version of this syllabus will be available at the NYU Politics website.

If the link in the syllabus is unavailable, look up the article by the full citation listed on the syllabus using the databases available through NYU Library. Most articles are available through JSTOR or Ingenta. If you have difficulty locating an article, go to Bobst webpage (http://library.nyu.edu/), chose articles via databases; in databases by title, find Article First; connect, and search for the article by title or author name. Once you find the article, choose NYU libraries at external resources, and the pop-up window will show you all the available sources for the full text.
Remote Access to NYU Libraries and Online Sources

Students can gain access to NYU research engines through NYU Home. Log in to your account and follow the “research” links. If NYU Home is down, you can still access the library information sources from a computer system attached to NYU’s network, through the library web page (http://library.nyu.edu/).

If you would like to access NYU libraries and some of the online journals from a remote area (like home), you will need to configure your internet browser to permit full access from an external connection using NYU’s proxy server. See attachment below for detailed instructions on how to do this. It is easy. If you need assistance, contact ITS by phone at (212) 998-3333 or by email at its.clientservices@nyu.edu
