Helen Nissenbaum is a professor of information science at Cornell Tech, on leave from New York University. Her books include Obfuscation: A User's Guide for Privacy and Protest, with Finn Brunton (MIT Press, 2015) and Privacy in Context: Technology, Policy, and the Integrity of Social Life (Stanford, 2010). Grants from DARPA, NSF, and DHHS have supported her work on ethical and political dimensions of digital technologies. Recipient of the 2014 Barwise Prize of the American Philosophical Association, Nissenbaum has contributed to privacy-enhancing software, including TrackMeNot and AdNauseam. She holds a Ph.D. in philosophy from Stanford University.
