N an attempt to rob a silk warehouse, Tommy McGrath (Frank Coghlan, Jr.) and Fats Moody (Edward Arnold, Jr.), two unemployed lads, one egotistic, the other weak-willed, are nearly caught and run away from the police. They eventually join the Civilian Conservation Corps under assumed names, and Tommy becomes extremely unpopular because he ignores all rules and regulations. However, when he insults a camp leader and is beaten several times in fair fights, he learns to have respect for his uniform.

Tommy falls in love with the town sheriff’s daughter (Florine McKinney) but when a local camp official is mysteriously killed, the blame is put on Tommy, who has been seen arguing with him. He escapes to a shack near by. When a deputy attempts to arrest him, he handcuffs him to a bed. As he flees from the cabin, he discovers an eccentric crank setting fire to the brush and when he tries to stop him, is shot in the shoulder.

Tommy goes back to the C.C.C. camp and instructs the captain of the exact fire location. Then he returns to the cabin and rescues the deputy and the sheriff’s daughter, who has gone to warn Tommy of the deputy. Tommy wins a forestry appointment when it is discovered the crank did the killing.
