Since graduating, Tamara Porras has worked as a Teach for America corps member. While working to help close the achievement gap, Tamara developed a curriculum that used photography and visual literacy to stimulate the development of literacy and critical thinking skills for K-12 students. She will also be continuing her personal photography work exploring the gentrification and development of Brooklyn through its urban landscape.