Cody Brown wants to help the world make the web. For the past year he has been working on the web startup scrollkit.com (https://www.scrollkit.com/) which makes it possible for people without programming knowledge to become authors online. scroll kit raised funding from the knight foundation in the fall of 2011.

Cody studied journalism and filmmaking at NYU. While he was there he spent most of his time starting the school's campus blog, NYU Local. The publication is approaching its four year anniversary and continues to be the most trafficked publication on campus, earning 1.7 million hits in the Spring 2009 semester and hosting a new media conference last year called young media weekend.
