Doll Party (Baptème de Poupée)
By: KATIA ULYSSE
Start Page: 138
URL: http://library.nyu.edu/calabash/vol2iss2/0202138.pdf

Calabash: A Journal of Caribbean Arts and Letters is an international literary journal dedicated to publishing works encompassing, but not limited to, the Anglophone, Francophone, Hispanophone and Dutch-speaking Caribbean. The Journal is especially dedicated to presenting the arts and letters of those communities that have long been under-represented within the creative discourse of the region, among them: Aruba and the Netherlands Antilles, Maroon societies, and the Asian and Amerindian societies of the region. Calabash has a strong visual arts component.

Calabash is published by New York University. Please contact the publisher for further permissions regarding the use of this work. Publisher information may be obtained at: http://library.nyu.edu/calabash/about.html

Calabash: A Journal of Caribbean Arts and Letters
© 2003 New York University
Katia Ulysse

DOLL PARTY
(Baptême de Poupée)

Forget the curtain of fire, the curfew
The quiet streets, and the open graves
Forget the glint of pear-shaped bullets, the Watchmen cradling their rifles

Forget the nameless heroes
Silenced for sowing seeds of peace
Forget the bloodstained rope binding their wrists
The defiance streaming from their swollen eyes

Forget everything
Until we’ve christened the new doll
The women will cook white rice
Fry goat meat, and bake a yellow cake
The men will bring rum, ice cubes and
Light bulbs: red, blue, and maybe green

And when the children’s tongues turn cola-champagne orange
When the rifles begin their pop-pop-pop lullaby,
Putting the babies to sleep
The single bulb will cast a gentle glow

The grownups will lock their bodies and sway
To a soft bolero borrowed
From a mariachi band far beyond the frontier

And everyone will be Happy