Part-Time Lecturer in Cognitive Neuroscience

New York University (NYU) Berlin is seeking a part-time lecturer to teach a course in cognitive neuroscience in the Spring 2018 semester. Candidates should be passionate about teaching and supporting students in their studies, have a track record of academic publications in the field, and be fluent in English.

Position:
We are seeking a part-time lecturer for the Spring 2018 semester to teach a course in cognitive neuroscience. The course provides students with a broad understanding of the foundations of cognitive neuroscience, including dominant theories of the neural underpinnings of a variety of cognitive processes, and the research that has led to those theories. In doing so, students also learn about the goals of cognitive neuroscience research and the methods that are being employed to reach these goals.

The course meets once per week for 2.5 hours. The sessions are a mixture of seminar and lecture, rather than straight lecture, and possibly also include field trips. The Spring term begins on January 29th and ends on May 18th, 2018.

Requirements for Interested Candidates:

- Doctorate in psychology or another relevant discipline.
- Record of research and publications in the field.
- Minimum of three years teaching experience at university level.
- German work-permit and tax number at the time of application, covering the entire period of the employment.
- Preference will be given to candidates who have been doctoral students and postdoctoral fellows in the US and/or have international teaching experience.
- Women, ethnic minorities, persons of minority sexual orientation or gender identity, and individuals with disabilities are encouraged to apply.

Terms and conditions will be discussed with the successful applicant.

About New York University (NYU)
Founded in 1831, New York University is one of the largest and most prestigious private universities in the United States. NYU is based in New York but also operates branch campuses and research programs in other parts of the U.S. and around the world. As a community of scholars (faculty, students, and staff) that is inclusive of divergent backgrounds and historically underrepresented groups, NYU engages a diversity of viewpoints, perspectives, and approaches.
About NYU Berlin
NYU Berlin is one of NYU’s global study-away sites and provides U.S. and other international students with the opportunity to spend a semester studying in Berlin while earning credits towards their degree. The program is fully integrated into NYU’s curriculum and designed for BA students in the social sciences, arts and humanities who want to earn credit in their major - including art, art history, drama, environmental studies, European studies, German, history, math, music, politics, psychology, and sociology - while having a transformative experience abroad. Most courses are taught in English. Seminars and lectures take place at the academic center located within the complex of the Kulturbrauerei in Prenzlauer Berg and at NYU Berlin’s art and drama studio in Kreuzberg. The program size is 130 students per semester, as well as various January Term and Summer Schools.

Applications will be reviewed jointly by NYU Berlin and NYU New York. Interviews of short-listed candidates will be held in person at NYU Berlin and online/by phone with NYU New York faculty. Please submit your application by December 8th, 2017, to Mr. André Bretzke (andre.bretzke@nyu.edu), who will forward the application to the relevant NYU departments in Berlin and New York. Applications should be written in English (references can be in German) and consist of a C.V., a cover letter (including honorarium expectations), scans of degree certificates, as well as any available references (alternatively please supply the contact details of two potential referees) and student evaluations - preferably all in one single PDF file.
