NYU’s Student Senators Council Publishes Its Budget For Fiscal Year 2015-16

NEW YORK, NY (November 11, 2015) -- In efforts to achieve a higher level of transparency with NYU’s student body, the Student Senators Council (SSC) has published their budget for the first time in its history. The budget, which notes funds allocated for the current fiscal year, demonstrates the SSC’s commitment to funding student-led advocacy initiatives as well as student activities and leadership opportunities.

“The SSC has taken this unprecedented step to further address students’ concerns about transparency within NYU’s finance and governance systems,” said Michael Hengerer, Chair of the Student Senators Council. “By publishing this budget, we are holding ourselves more accountable to the student body.”

The SSC continues to urge the University to more effectively and transparently disclose how funds are allocated for all student activities and across the University at-large.

The budget can be found, in its entirety, here.

About NYU’s Student Senators Council

The Student Senators Council (SSC) is the overarching student government at NYU. We are constantly working with other students, organizations, faculty, and administrators at NYU to create the best university experience. We have a large team of Senators, Council Presidents, Committee Chairs and Students that help us advocate on behalf of students; create and further student-focused agendas; and lead new initiatives at the University.
