Part 1

In 2012, when I was an undergrad at Louisiana State University, I made a short film titled The Inconvenient Commute about the commuter parking situation on LSU's campus. The parking lots were located a good distance from the actual classrooms and they were often completely full, leaving you to play chicken for a spot. I wrote and directed the piece and my classmates in my group helped me scout locations, shoot, and edit.

To put it nicely, it's not the most well-made film. It has some sketchy camera work. If edited better, it'd probably be a 3 minute film instead of a 7 minute film. But it does contain a lot of accurate information and I think the film did succeed in shedding light on a real issue.

This movie can be found on youtube.com and vimeo.com by searching "The Inconvenient Commute". It was made as a class project. I didn't try to submit it to any local film festivals. It was not used or published anywhere.
